By Paul David Robinson

Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Rebecca Swift (illustrator). Large Print. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.In September, 1879, five-year-old Jamie is on her way with her family in a wagon train going from Granada to Santa Fe. They left Cincinnati by train so her father can go to Santa Fe for his health and set up a brewery. Jamie hears rifle shots and screams and wakes up from her nap and sees her eleven-year-old girlfriend Laura stripped naked and staked out on a hill by renegade whites. She sees Laura's father dead on the ground. Jamie sees her father tortured and her mother gang-raped. Jamie is terrified. Jamie grabs her pink blankie, jumps barefoot out of the back of the covered wagon, crawls away from the massacre, and hides in the roots of a huge cottonwood blown over by a storm. Jess is on his way home to Pueblo, Colorado to take part in the big poker game at the end of September. He was the big winner last year and is obligated to be there again this year. He left New Orleans and heads back to...
