I am going away, answered Virginia. As soon as I had finished this letter I was coming to ask you if you would please cash the check Cousin Tom gave me yesterday for my Christmas gift. If you could I would not have to go to the bank. I shall need it for my railroad fare. May I inquire where you are going said Mrs. Matthews. Only as far as Alexandria to visit my greataunt there. She has often asked me to come. Very well, answered her cousin, I will have Tom take you down himself. I do not think the journey will be too much for him. It will be only a few hours. Until now Virginia had maintained her selfcontrol, but her cousins willingness to let her have her own way was so unexpected that her fortitude gave way and...
