THE VOCATIONAL EDUCATION TEST BOOKS The report of the Committee on Vocational Education was presented in abstract by the chairman, George E. Williamson. He made a statement regarding the finances showing how the funds had been spent and submitted a report by the auditors, Price, Waterhouse Co., after which he called on J. Newell Stephenson, editor of the textbooks on papermaking, to make a progress report, which he did, as follows: PROGRESS REPORT REGARDING THE TEXT BOOKS Mr. Chairman and Members of the T. A. P. P. I: Instead of merely stating what has happened since I last reported to you on the preparation of the text books it seemed appropriate at this time to make what might be called An Accomplishment Report. It is almost exactly two years since the Joint Committee was organized and somewhat less than that since the honor and labor of the editorship were urged upon me by the enthusiastic chairman of the Joint Committee. It was obvious from the first that we were undertaking an enormous task--and it isn t shrinking any. You will pardon a bit of family history. Just before this matter engulfed me, I had planned a series of articles...
