When hungry aliens begin their rain of terror, break out the umbrellas--the aliens can t eat you with an umbrella shoved in their huge mouths. Looking for yummy human tenders, Admiral Nact-bauk invades the local school. Zack and Zoey lead the counterattack armed with rulers, protractors, and dodge balls. They might have a chance, if Nact-bauk didn t gulp down the only teacher brave enough to stand up to him. Even worse, he forces Zoey onboard the alien vessel for dinner--along with a bucket of honey-mustard sauce. Zack will do just about anything to save her. If Principal Blathers won t help, Zack sees no choice but to borrow the principal s car. Chasing the alien saucers, he meets up with a wrinkly WWII hero who thinks he knows the alien s weakness: electric toothbrushes. Wielding only umbrellas and battery-powered dental weapons, things look grim. Even if the pair manage to rescue Zoey, there s the small matter of escaping a spacecraft flying at over two hundred miles an hour. Can you say, Jetpacks? This book is formatted with the OpenDyslexic font. However, it can also be enjoyed by non-dyslexic readers as well. Zack Zoey s Alien Apocalypse is approximately 17,000 words (similar in length to Diary of a Wimpy Kid) and contains no cursing or strong language.
